

The American Diabetes Association® and DaVita Raise Awareness about the Link between Diabetes and Kidney Disease during American Diabetes Month®

Collaborative effort helps people take steps to better manage their diabetes and kidney health

DENVER, Nov. 1, 2021 /PRNewswire/ -- In honor of American Diabetes Month® (ADM), the American Diabetes Association® (ADA) and DaVita are coming together to educate Americans about the connection between diabetes and kidney disease. Throughout the month of November, both organizations will be sharing resources to inform people about taking steps to help prevent or slow these chronic conditions.

In honor of American Diabetes Month® (ADM), the American Diabetes Association® (ADA) and DaVita are coming together to educate Americans about the connection between diabetes and kidney disease.

"During American Diabetes Month and beyond, we're working together to help remove barriers, deliver comprehensive education and better support people with pre-diabetes, diabetes, and kidney disease," said Dr. Robert Gabbay, chief scientific and medical officer for the American Diabetes Association. "Our collaboration with DaVita has created a valuable network to get information to those who need it most, and we're proud to have already reached 35 million people to date."

Diabetes is one of the leading causes of kidney disease globally. An estimated 1.5 million people in the U.S. are diagnosed with diabetes every year, while 37 million are estimated to be living with kidney disease. Both chronic conditions disproportionately impact Black and Hispanic communities, many of whom are already at higher risk for other chronic diseases, such as heart disease and obesity.

This ADM campaign aims to give people small, tangible steps they can take to help reduce their risk of developing diabetes and kidney disease. The vision is for the small steps to add up to a larger, positive impact on this population's overall long-term health.

As part of this effort, Dr. Jeff Giullian, chief medical officer for DaVita, and Tina Livaudais, chief nursing officer for DaVita, will join Dr. Robert Gabbay on Nov. 19 for a live discussion about diabetes and kidney disease. For more information, visit diabetes.org/bigstepup.

DaVita and the ADA have collaborated over the past year to curate and develop resources that provide essential information about kidney disease risks and prevention methods to those who need it most. These resources include:

- Dietitian-reviewed, kidney-friendly recipes
- No-cost kidney health classes that are open to the community
- Community engagement on social channels and in media that promotes health literacy

"We're committed to addressing kidney disease holistically, which includes a strong focus on preventive care and risk reduction," said Dr. Giullian. "Through our work with the ADA, we're building awareness of the connection between two of the most common chronic conditions worldwide and helping provide no-cost tools accessible to the public to better address and manage these conditions."
