

Paul Lim, M.D., Joins HealthCare Partners' National Clinical Leadership Team

DENVER, May 8, 2015 /PRNewswire/ -- DaVita HealthCare Partners Inc. (NYSE: DVA) today announced Paul Lim, M.D., will serve as a national medical director supporting HealthCare Partners' national clinical initiatives, including medical management, care transitions and utilization management.

"HealthCare Partners is very pleased to have Dr. Paul Lim back on our team," said Tyler Jung, M.D., chief medical officer at HealthCare Partners. "He brings a wealth of knowledge and broad clinical and administrative management expertise to carry out our clinical initiatives nationally."

Most recently, Dr. Lim served as chief medical officer at Prospect Medical Group where he oversaw medical management, performance programs and the pharmacy departments for its independent physician associations (IPAs). Previously, he was senior medical director at Regal Medical Group from August 2008 to December 2012. He also held several senior leadership roles including senior vice president of clinical operations at Carelevel Management Medical Group from February 2003 to May 2008.

"It's exciting to be back at HealthCare Partners where it all began for me," said Dr. Lim. "I'm honored to join the Office of the Chief Medical Officer during this time of great transformation in healthcare."

Dr. Lim was first employed by HealthCare Partners from July 1994 to February 2003 practicing as a primary care physician and lead physician.

He received his bachelor's degree in biochemistry and cellular biology from University of California, San Diego and his doctor of medicine from Loma Linda University School of Medicine. He completed his internal medicine residency at Huntington Memorial Hospital.
